Kim Jong Un, Chairman of the Workers' Party of Korea and Chairman of the State Affairs Commission of the DPRK, met with Donald J. Trump, President of the United States of America, on Sentosa Island, Singapore, on June 12, to hold the DPRK-US summit meeting and talks for the first time in history.

Thousands of paparazzi from across the world and numerous people gathered in different places of Singapore to watch every second of the long-awaited, defining moment.

Kim Jong Un left the lodging hotel at 8:10 am local time and arrived at Capella Hotel on Sentosa Island, the venue of the summit.

The flags of the DPRK and the US hanged alongside at the lobby.

At 9:00 am local time, Supreme Leader Kim Jong Un met and took the first handshake with US President Donald J. Trump.

This signalled the first step the top leaders of the two countries have taken towards reconciliation, coming face to face with each other for dialogue, for the first time in over 70 years—a period of conflict and antagonism since the division of the Korean peninsula.

Kim Jong Un posed for a photograph with Trump before heading for the conference room talking with the latter.

There were one-on-one talks between the two leaders.

It was really not easy that we have got to where we are, Kim Jong Un said, adding that we were once hostage to the past and had our eyes and ears covered by ingrained prejudice and practice. But we have overcome everything and we are now here at the new starting point, he said.

The two leaders shared candid views on the pending issues of vital significance in ending the decades-long hostile relationship between the DPRK and the US and ensuring peace and stability on the Korean peninsula.

The tête-à-tête was followed by enlarged talks.

Both sides held a comprehensive and in-depth discussion about the re-establishment of DPRK-US relations and the setup of a permanent and stable peace regime on the Korean peninsula.

Noting that he is honoured to sit together with President Trump and other members of the US delegation, Supreme Leader Kim Jong Un highly appreciated Trump's willingness and passion to seek a negotiated, realistic settlement of the issues despite the past history of hostility between the two countries.

President Trump was hopeful that the summit would lead to the improvement of bilateral relations, and attributed the current atmosphere of peace and stability on the Korean peninsula and beyond, which was teetering on the brink of military conflict even some months ago, to the proactive peace initiatives the Supreme Leader has taken from the outset of the year.

Many issues have stemmed from the deep-rooted distrust and hostility between the two countries, Kim Jong Un said, noting that both countries need to be understanding towards each other, promise to refrain from antagonizing the other party and take legal and institutional measures to guarantee it in order to ensure peace and stability on the peninsula and denuclearize it.

He also stressed the need for both sides to take practical measures at an early date to implement the issues dealt with at the talks and the joint statement. He accepted on the spot Trump's request for recovering the remains of American soldiers and repatriating those already identified and gave an instruction on taking a step to address the issue as early as possible.

To build a permanent and stable peace regime on the Korean peninsula is vital for ensuring peace and security in the region and the rest of the world, said Kim Jong Un. And he pointed to the need to make a courageous decision to halt the provocative, hostile military actions for now.

Expressing his sympathy with it, Trump voiced his willingness to stop the US-south Korea joint military exercises, which the DPRK side regards as provocative, while the dialogue of goodwill is under way between the two countries, to offer a security assurance to the DPRK and to lift sanctions against it in keeping with the improvement of bilateral relations through dialogue and negotiations.

Kim Jong Un stated that if the US side takes genuine trust-building measures to improve relations the DPRK is also ready to take additional goodwill measures of the next stage in kind.

The two leaders agreed that it is important to observe the principle of taking step-by-step and simultaneous action in the course of the effort to ensure peace, stability and denuclearization of the Korean peninsula.

After the talks, both sides got together for a luncheon.

They exchanged views on further promoting bilateral communication, contact and visit to build on the achievements made at the talks and drastically develop the bilateral ties.

After the luncheon, the two leaders had a walk, deepening rapport.

Chairman Kim Jong Un and President Donald J. Trump signed a joint statement of the Singapore summit.

Today both sides are to sign the historic joint statement which marks the departure from the past for a new start, Kim Jong Un said, adding that the world would witness a remarkable change.

Chairman Kim Jong Un and President Trump had a photograph taken as a token of the adoption of the momentous document and said their farewells.

Kim Jong Un invited Trump to visit Pyongyang at a convenient time and Trump also invited Kim Jong Un to visit the US.

They accepted each other's invitation with pleasure, convinced that such invitation would provide another chance to improve relations.

The successful Singapore summit which drew enthusiastic support and welcome from around the world marks a mega event of paramount importance in stimulating the current trend toward reconciliation, peace, stability and prosperity on the Korean peninsula and beyond and in effecting a dramatic turn in the relationship between the long-time foes as required by the developing times.

By Encouraging People to All-out Resistance for National Liberation

Whenever August 15 comes round, the Korean people recollect with deep emotion the brilliant exploit President Kim Il Sung achieved in providing a new turning point for national resuscitation.

The whole period of the anti-Japanese war organized and led by Kim Il Sung constituted the process of creating a new history of an all-out resistance as well as of active armed struggle waged by the Korean People's Revolutionary Army against the Japanese military occupation of Korea. Korea's liberation was the first event that was achieved by the general mobilization of all the Korean people in the history of the national liberation struggle in colonial countries on this planet.

Already in the initial days of pioneering the Korean revolution Kim Il Sung unfolded a plan of liberating the country through a nationwide, organizational and active resistance against Japanese imperialists and devoted his painstaking efforts to its implementation in the whole course of the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

In May Juche 25 (1936) he formed the Association for the Restoration of the Fatherland (ARF), a nationwide united front body, and adopted the Ten-Point Programme of the Association for the Restoration of the Fatherland, and made public an Appeal to All Korean Compatriots in September Juche 26 (1937), thus arousing the wholehearted support and sympathy of the 20 million Korean people and inspiring the broad masses from all walks of life to the resistance against Japanese imperialism.

Early in January Juche 32 (1943) he convened a meeting of military and political cadres of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army and set out the orientation of the final offensive against Japan to liberate Korea. He defined the three-point line for national liberation, a general offensive of the KPRA, an all-people revolt combined with it, and joint operations behind enemy lines, and accelerated the preparations for an all-people resistance on a fuller scale.

He ensured that the existing secret camps were fortified as the military and political bases for all-out resistance while building new satellite secret camps. He also made efforts to rally more forces and prepare them for operations to liberate the country, and give unified guidance over them.

Thanks to his wise leadership, the KPRA, with the final battle against the Japanese imperialists just ahead, was developed into a revolutionary force capable of performing a proactive and core role in the decisive battle for the country's liberation, and the forces for all-out resistance were flawlessly prepared across the country to join in the KPRA's operations for national liberation.

On August 9, Juche 34 (1945) the units of the KPRA made their advance on the order of Kim Il Sung, wiping out the Japanese aggressor troops, and, together with them, the resistance forces in the homeland started their general offensive.

People's armed corps, armed resistance groups and broad sections of the people harassed the enemy in the rear by boldly attacking the Japanese imperialist aggressor troops, gendarmerie and police establishments, and rendered active support to the advancing KPRA units.

The Korean people made the death-defying and decisive all-out resistance to put an end to the Japanese imperialists' military occupation, and finally greeted their long-cherished national liberation.

Undying exploits Kim Il Sung performed in defeating the Japanese aggressors by pooling the concerted efforts of the nation and achieving the sacred cause of liberation are going down in the history.

Rinsan Catfish Farm

In June a catfish farm was commissioned in Taechon-ri, Rinsan County, North Hwanghae Province. The area is blessed with hot spring water of 28°C with a daily yield of over 60m<sup>3</sup>. The province took necessary measures to complete the project in a short time, giving priority to designing, forming a construction force and securing building materials.

With a water recycling system, the farm has 1 700m<sup>2</sup> of indoor spawning pond, 1 300m<sup>2</sup> of outdoor pond, indoor fattening ground and fry block, integrated control room and feed processing ground.

With a mission to supply more than two million fry a year to cities and counties in the province, the farm pays close attention to scientific and technological breeding of catfish.

A great effort is put to the improvement of the employees' technical skills and qualifications and the operation of sci-tech learning space, so as to introduce the advanced fish farming methods.

Scientific fish breeding system is established, thus ensuring water temperature and oxygen content, artificial and natural fertilization and hatching. Along with this, it has solved itself the hypophysis problem to lay a solid foundation for producing millions of fry a year.

New feed processing method has been introduced to lower the feed consumption rate, raise protein content and feed absorption rate.

Solar energy is widely used in the farm's management.

Good physiographical conditions and scientific fish farming render a great contribution to increasing its profit.

Facelifted Poman-ri

Poman-ri in Sohung County, North Hwanghae Province, presented its facelifted appearance.

Wide fish ponds and paddy fields surrounded by mountains thickly wooded with fruit trees, idiosyncratic houses, school, kindergarten, hall of culture, sci-tech learning space and Poman Health Complex—the village looks like a picture scroll.

Under the close concern of the Party and the state, aimed at developing countryside into a fairyland so that farmers could enjoy a civilized life as urban population does, the new appearance was unfolded in Poman-ri.

The farm not only renovated many architectural structures including houses, kindergarten and nursery but also built a school, hospital, sci-tech learning space, hall of culture, shop, health complex and even 60-odd houses.

Beaming faces of the locals can be seen in modern houses people cook foods and heat the rooms with the help of electricity, and other places of the village—school, kindergarten, hall of culture, health complex and so on.

Farmers study till late at night in the sci-tech learning space to learn advanced farming methods, and singing of the better future of their village resounds in the hall of culture.

The health complex equipped with barber's, beauty parlour, bathrooms, wading pool, table tennis room and other welfare service and sports facilities serves the local farmers for their well-being.

With the pride in turning their village into a cultured socialist rural area by their own efforts, the farmers of Poman-ri have all turned out so as to reap bumper crops.

Triplets in Taedong

In Korea the birth of a set of triplets is regarded as an auspicious event, an event heralding the prosperity of the country, and the state takes care of them on its own responsibility.

Pak Jung Ae, Pak Kyong Ae and Pak Chang Su, triplets living in the town of Taedong County, South Phyongan Province, greeted their 60th birth anniversary this year.

When they were born, the first triplets after the formation of their native county, their parents, ordinary working people, felt ill at ease before feeling happy, for Ho Hwak Sil, their mother, was not in a condition appropriate for bringing up two children at a time, much less three, because of the wound she had sustained during the Fatherland Liberation War (June 25, 1950 - July 27, 1953). And the days were when the Korean people were striving to lay the foundations of socialism after undertaking postwar reconstruction, tightening their belts.

After getting acquainted with their living conditions, the state ensured that the family moved to a four-roomed house in a cosy place, the largest house in the county at the time. Money, nutritive foods, medicines and clothing were granted to the triplets not only after their birth but on various occasions including their birth anniversaries. And a doctor, nurse and nanny were entrusted with the task for exclusively looking after Ho and her triplets.

Triplets and their parents were given silver daggers and gold rings by the country [Juche 81 (1992)]

The happy life of the triplets that began after their birth continued—in their days at kindergarten, primary and middle school days, and even after they married after graduating from college.

The parents and triplets received silver daggers and gold rings from the state in Juche 81 (1992), when the state instituted the system of conferring these ornamental things on triplets and their parents across the country.

Though the triplets have now become grandmothers and grandfather, the state's concern for them is as close as the days when they were young.

Cherishing the affection and solicitude of the state, the triplets are now giving full play to their abilities in good health at people's power, welfare service and public catering organs.

With Patriotic Heart

It was in the autumn of Juche 105 (2016) that a pilot production of furfural took place at the Thaechon Ryongop Factory newly built in Thaechon County in North Phyongan Province.

With the start of the production just ahead on, Kim Jae Sol, director of the Ryongop Joint Venture Company, looked back on the decade-long painstaking efforts made for the establishment of the new industry which would play a significant role in the country's chemical industry.

One autumnal day in Juche 93 (2004) Kim visited a farm on the outskirts of Pyongyang and saw by chance huge piles of corn cobs at the threshing ground.

At that time corn cobs were mostly used as fuel in rural households, and only a little amount for mushroom farming.

Kim, who majored in biology at Kim Il Sung University, was a stranger to chemistry, but at the sight of the abandoned piles of corn cobs he wondered whether they contained useful elements like other plants and began to probe into the subject.

He frequented the organic chemistry department of his alma mater, e-library at Kim Chaek University of Technology, and the Grand People's Study House to delve into the subject, and finally discovered that corn cobs contained pentosan, an element necessary for producing furfural with economic profit, by 30 percent. He also realized that, with furfural as the starting material, a new realm of chemical industry could be created.

And the country's maize output was sufficient to provide raw materials for furfural production.

However, as its production was the exclusive possession by only a few countries, Kim was faced with the daunting task of blazing a trail in this field. Despite the fact, he boldly embarked on the project and made tireless efforts to lay scientific foundations for production, establish production processes, lay out and assemble machinery and equipment, and erect production buildings, all by the factory employees' own efforts and technology.

After 12 years of arduous and painstaking efforts, Kim at last greeted the commencement of pilot production.

He was also well aware that furfural production involved some risk of explosion and personal injury caused by either minor mistake or carelessness, as it constituted continuous processes at high temperature and under high pressure.

He keenly watched the production process for 48 hours, regardless of his personal risk, his heart pulsating with patriotism.

At last furfural began to turn out after two days, and the whole factory was enveloped in delight.

Kim and the factory's officials and workers made continuous efforts to produce furfural with high-purity of 99.98 percent and put its production on a normal footing, thereby supplying furfural to various economic sectors.

They also save much coal by recycling waste corn cobs into fuel.

Patriotic deeds Kim Jae Sol performed to create valuable assets of the country became the pride of the country.

Traditional Sport

Ssirum

Ssirum is a traditional sport of Korea, originated in the last days of Ancient Joson (early 30th century BC - 108 BC).

According to historical records, the contents and way of playing the game were further developed and enriched in the days of the state of Koguryo.

Drawn on the right wall of the coffin chamber of the Ssirum Tomb (late 4th century) from the days of Koguryo (277 BC - AD 668) are two able-bodied men playing a ssirim game. A similar drawing is painted in Jangchon Tomb No. 1.

In terms of content, form and method, the Korean type of wrestling is unique as well as similar when compared to wrestling of other nations. If a satpa, composed of waistband and leg band, is available, everyone, young or old, can play the game, and it is easy to display one's skills, strength and forte.

Ssirum, a Korean painting by Kim Hong Do, a renowned painter in the 18th century, vividly portrays two men playing the game and other people watching them. This illustrates that the Korean people enjoyed playing the sport.

They played it not only on their folk holidays but during breaks in the rice-transplanting, weeding and harvesting seasons.

There were slight differences in how the sport was played according to regional customs and the aptitudes of players, but it was common to divide the games into those for adults, young men and boys and there was not a drawn game.

Now ssirim game is part and parcel of nationwide sport competitions.

The Grand Bull Prize National Ssirum Contest is held on every Chusok festival, a folk holiday, that falls on the 15th day of the eighth month by the lunar calendar, in a grand way amid great interest of the people including amateurs. Teams and individuals play according to bodyweight, and the winners are awarded prizes.

In the past it was regarded that a stronger man would always win a game, but thanks to the study, systematization and propagation of various skills the result of the games is now dependent on how a player employs his skills by taking advantage of his opponent's weak points.

A popular sport that can be played in disregard of conditions, time and place, ssirim fosters strength, patience, bravery and fortitude, making the whole country imbued with optimistic way of life.
